PREFACE

The INDEX to the PUBLISHERS' TRADE LIST ANNUAL of 1902, issued in a separate volume exceeding eleven hundred pages, was received with general favor by the trade as the most practical and useful short-title key to current books that had been supplied for booktrade and library purposes, and those concerned in its preparation and publication desire to express their cordial appreciation of the good words from many of its users. The work outran, as bibliographies of any kind are apt to do, the early estimates of size and cost, and at the price at which it was announced and published the number of copies sold to the limited constituency in this country for any bibliographical work, left the returns far short of the outlay. It has been found absolutely impracticable therefore to repeat a complete index each year, and indeed the reissue of the comprehensive Index in 1904 or a succeeding year will depend somewhat upon the demand shown for the present Supplementary Index and for the combined index covering the two alphabets in one. For this and other reasons the plan has been adopted of printing the present Supplementary Index to accompany the PUBLISHERS' TRADE LIST ANNUAL of 1903, the thirty-first year of its publication.

This SUPPLEMENTARY INDEX indexes the lists of 128 publishers not represented in the INDEX of 1902, and is, therefore, in itself a most important addition to the booksellers' and librarians' reference books.

The present work includes four classes of entries:

1. Those covering books old or new in catalogues from publishers represented this year and not included in the CATALOGUES volume for 1902.

2. Those covering new books in catalogues of publishers represented both in last year's and this year's CATALOGUES volume.

3. Those covering, so far as practicable, changes of publishers resulting from combinations of publishing houses, changes of ownership and changes in prices.

4. Those covering errata and omissions in last year's INDEX.

The SUPPLEMENTARY INDEX thus brings the original INDEX up to date and indexes all new material, and is put at the service of the trade simultaneously with the issue of the CATALOGUES volume.

It is absolutely impossible to publish this INDEX at the same time with the CATALOGUES volume and give it accurate comparison with the lists which do not reach us until the INDEX is well in type. We must depend upon the publishers for advance information on new books, and some of them are uncertain about books to be included in their lists until it is too late for us to include them. This year publishers have understood this more thoroughly, and most have supplied full information of all their fall books.

There were in 1902-3 an unusual amount of changes in publishing firms, and some of these have not been fully prepared to say which of the books acquired would be added permanently to their own catalogues. It is not possible to make a wholly accurate index that is not out of date before it can be put at the service of the trade. The great aim of the INDEX to the TRADE LIST ANNUAL is to direct dealers to the publishers of books inquired for. We have endeavored to include prices, as accurately as possible, but the new net system has led to many changes that have not been fully reported.

It is hoped that this SUPPLEMENTARY INDEX will prove as acceptable to the booktrade as the original INDEX, and that the returns from both together may encourage the continuation of the enterprise in the coming years.

The following list indicates the most important changes by transfer of books to other publishers:
